Apple Bytes

A publication of San Leandro Macintosh User Group

Channel Camp Report

Bev and I, along with 160 other hearty souls and Apple Consultants, spent a tidy sum for the privilege of listening to a number Apple's finest instructors cover a of variety of subjects. It was fast and furious from 7:15a until 6:30p - 5 days of trying to drink from a fire hose. Now I have been through cram courses before, but this was busy week.

I did enjoy the 4-hour visit with Aperture. That was much like a combination of Adobe Photoshop and Adobe Light table. Very powerful and broad ranged. Really a dynamite program if you are into editing photos. Very impressive. Head and shoulders above iPhoto. But iphoto is free and Aperture is $300, but worth it.

Lots of server coverage, File MakerPro, Apple Remote Desktop, Shake, Network management and on and on. Lots more.

I must admit, a lot was over my head. On the other hand, I learned a lot. Will I go back next year? Probably because I want to keep learning and stay up to date on Apple's latest inovations.

After reading iWoz and iCon I think I have a little better insight on the way Apple does things....

That's it for now...

November 2nd meeting features...

Bob and his trusty Group should be somewhere near Siberia in just a few days. It is time for the annual election of Club Officers again. This would be a good time to take care of business. Perhaps Jay will update us on the MITI Computer project. As usual, Ed will have several nifty new items on the Dom.
